USA Today talks to Bernhoft about his new album Islander

“Friendship is the beating heart of Bernhoft’s new album Islander, premiering on USATODAY.com ahead of its release June 23.

Since breaking out with viral hit C’Mon Talk in 2011 — and playing The Ellen DeGeneres Show later that year and Conan last summer — the Norwegian singer has constantly been on the go, sometimes finding it difficult to make time for those that mean most.

“I might be onstage, on a plane, or in a different time zone, and my friends don’t always feel like they can call me any time, and I would like them to,” says Jarle Bernhoft, who goes by his last name. In writing the new record, the singer/songwriter was influenced by early Stevie Wonder and Carole King, whose You’ve Got a Friend is “a pretty pivotal song about friendship and platonic love,” he says.

Islander was written and recorded last summer, and is described as a more “organic-sounding” record than his previous efforts. The album includes No Us, No Them, a duet with Jill Scott, whom he met when they played the Nobel Peace Prize concert in Oslo in 2011, and Freedom, his sentimental favorite of the 11 new songs.

In support of the record, Bernhoft will return to Conan for a performance Tuesday, after headlining a Los Angeles show tonight and ahead of his New York concert June 24. After playing a slew of European shows this summer, he’ll come back to the States to perform at Austin City Limits Music Festival in October and kick off a North American tour.

“I’m really looking forward to getting out there and playing these songs live,” Bernhoft says. “(Islander) was painful to write, and sometimes painful to record as well, but I’m very proud of it.” - USA Today, 6/9/2014

Getting a Current perspective on Ray LaMontagne

“When you have a voice like Ray LaMontagne, it would be easy for him to keep making the same album over and over. That might be enough to please his many adoring fans. But with his fifth album, Supernova he chose to mix it up. Dan Auerbach — yeah, that guy from the Black Keys — was enlisted to produce this one; I have no idea where Auerbach finds the time. But this album might be the freshest and most adventurous of LaMontagne’s career. On Supernova you realize this is a different sort of album right out of the gate. LaMontagne’s usual raspy vocal is softer, smoother and hushed on the track “Lavender” over a gentle psychedelic groove recalling The Zombies. “Airwaves” is part bossa nova and part country. “She’s the One” sounds like Otis Redding fronting The Allman Brothers Band.

The album’s title track and lead single, “Supernova” — at first I thought it was a head-scratcher. It sounds a bit like the kind of tune you’d hear on AM radio in the early ‘70s. One friend even mentioned it sounds like Bob Seger?? I don’t know if that’s bad or good. Seger has sold millions of records; you can’t argue with his success. But I don’t know if I want LaMontagne going down that road. But when you hear the song as part of the whole record, it neatly fits the vibe of the album.

Through his first four albums, Ray LaMontagne had become old reliable. You had a pretty good idea what you were going to get before you opened the package. With this one, he has largely abandoned the ‘70s-inspired singer-songwriter mode in favor of a more ‘60s psych-pop sound. I’ve never heard Ray LaMontagne sound quite like this.

The reclusive singer is notoriously hard on himself — this is the guy who almost quit music altogether prior to making this album. I’m glad he didn’t! Supernova is an enjoyable ride start to finish!” - KCMP blog, 5/26/14

Coming up soon: The Hold Steady “I Hope This Whole Thing Didn’t Frighten You,” Bastille “Flaws”...
