American Songwriter analyzes the new music and video from Anderson East

"I about had enough / Can't make sense of this world we're living in / It keeps speeding up / Playing sides in this game nobody wins. Therein its opening, Anderson East cracks open first single "Madelyn," a peer into all the dystopian, curious, and uncertain lives permeating upcoming fifth album Maybe We Never Die (Elektra/Low Country Sound) out August 20.

Regrouping with Grammy-winning producer Dave Cobb (John Prince, The Highwomen, Rival Sons), along with longtime bandleader and now co-producer Philip Towns, the Alabama-born artist sways between the solitude and connectedness through the 12 tracks of Maybe We Never Die.

Exploring life after death and some kind of immortal love, the "Madelyn" video, directed by Nico Poalillo, finds East in his MDLYN Corp. Lab—the imagined set running through the scenes of Maybe We Never Die—and an exploratory look at "love never dies."

A follow up to 2018 release Encore, which produced the Grammy-nominated single, "All On My Mind," Maybe We Never Die is a continuation of the deeply reflective state East found himself in 2020 when the pandemic hit. "Now, I'm more reflective and I'm beginning to realize what being a human being really means" East recently shared with American Songwriter. "It's a nice reset."

East went on to create the YouTube series Isolation Collective Sessions, where he and his bandmates (on split-screen videos) would perform various Encore tracks, while continuing his exploratory look at all the human conditions that eventually led to Maybe We Never Die.

"I wanted to create something unique with this record," says East. "A piece of music, that as a whole, knew where its footing was but yet still attempted to see what was behind the curtains. I'm very proud of what it took to make and its ultimate outcome. I am very grateful to the wonderfully talented humans that lent their gifts to make it what it is." - American Songwriter, 4/7/21

Rolling Stone shares details of the new Wallflowers record

"The Wallflowers have announced their new album Exit Wounds, Jakob Dylan and company's first LP in nine years. The band also debuted the first single "Roots and Wings" Thursday during a visit to Jimmy Kimmel Live.

Exit Wounds, due out July 9th, marks the Wallflowers' first album since 2012's Glad All Over. Butch Walker produced the LP, which also features Shelby Lynne on four tracks.

"I think everybody — no matter what side of the aisle you're on — wherever we're going to next, we're all taking a lot of exit wounds with us. Nobody is the same as they were four years ago. That, to me, is what Exit Wounds signifies," Dylan said of the album title in a statement. "And it's not meant to be negative at all. It just means that wherever you're headed, even if it's to a better place, you leave people and things behind, and you think about those people and those things and you carry them with you. Those are your exit wounds. And right now, we're swimming in them."

Dylan added of the band's nearly decade-long hiatus: "I'm the same writer I've always been — I was just also writing during a time when the world felt like it was falling apart. That changes the way you address even the simplest things, because you have panic in your mind all the time. You have anxiety. And you also have hope. And it's all in there."

Exit Wounds is available to preorder now ahead of its July 9th release. Additionally, the Wallflowers have scheduled a U.S. summer tour with Matchbox Twenty that kicks off just a week after Exit Wounds' release.

"The Wallflowers have always been a vehicle for me to make great rock & roll records," Dylan said. "And sometimes the lineup that makes the record transfers over into touring, and sometimes it doesn't. But my intention is always to make the Wallflowers record I want to make, using the musicians I have beside me." - Rolling Stone, 4/9/21

Paste has the goods on the new Lucy Dacus album Home Video

It's official, folks: New Lucy Dacus is on the way. The Richmond, Virginia singer/songwriter and boygenius member has announced one of Paste's most-anticipated 2021 albums, detailing Home Video (June 25, Matador Records) and sharing the music video for its lead single, "Hot & Heavy," which she'll perform on The Late Show with Stephen Colbert tonight.

After turning heads with her 2016 debut No Burden and breaking out big with Paste's top album of 2018, Historian, Dacus found a path to her musical future that led through her past. Home Video finds her taking a memoirist's eye (or is it ear?) to coming of age in her Virginia hometown, revisiting her geographical and emotional roots—including both the changes she underwent growing up there, and the ones she's experienced since her songwriting career took off ("people she didn't know were looking at her like they knew her better than she knew herself," a press release explains)—so as to write the universal from the personal.

"I thought I was writing 'Hot & Heavy' about an old friend, but I realized along the way that it was just about me outgrowing past versions of myself," explains Dacus in a statement. "So much of life is submitting to change and saying goodbye even if you don't want to. Now whenever I go to places that used to be significant to me, it feels like trespassing the past. I know that the teen version of me wouldn't approve of me now, and that's embarrassing and a little bit heartbreaking, even if I know intellectually that I like my life and who I am."

Dacus immerses herself in the past in her self-directed video for "Hot & Heavy," shot in Richmond's historic Byrd Theatre, where Dacus often saw movies as a teenager. "I knew I wanted to include some of the home video footage that my dad took of me while I was growing up. I wanted to visualize the moment when you first reflect on your childhood, which I think can also be the moment that childhood is over," she explains. "For me, I feel like there was a hard switch when I started releasing music, when my identity went from being a personal project to something publicly observed and reflected. I asked my family (shoutout to my grandma) and some of my closest friends to be extras because they're the people that knew me before that switch. I may have dropped out of film school, but I still love making movies and had a really fun time directing this one."

"Hot & Heavy" begins as memories often do, quiet and indistinct, with only Dacus' voice over gentle mellotron: "Being back here makes me hot in the face / Hot blood in my pulsing veins / Heavy memories weighing on my brain / Hot and heavy in the basement of your parents' place," she sings, focusing her mixed, yet visceral emotions on a specific person from her past, and acknowledging, "Try to walk away but I come back to the start." There's something about her home that's always with her, like the blood in her veins, and it's as if the song—jangly guitars, percussion pounding like a nervous teen's heart—swells along with Dacus' emotions, intensifying as she continues to dwell on it. Between this and "Thumbs," the fan-favorite track Dacus released last month, it would appear she has another knockout album on the way.

Dacus recorded Home Video in Nashville in August 2019 (speaking of the past!) with her friends and collaborators Jacob Blizard, Collin Pastore and Jake Finch, and her boygenius bandmates Phoebe Bridgers and Julien Baker added vocals to two tracks. She'll tour North America (pandemic permitting) this September and October in support of the record, kicking off her 28-date run with a two-night hometown stand alongside Baker and "special guests." Bachelor (i.e., Jay Som's Melina Duterte and Palehound's Ellen Kempner) and Barteaux Strange will provide support on the tour's first and second halves or so, respectively, while Shamir will perform at Dacus' Philadelphia show on Oct. 20. Tickets go on sale this Friday, April 16, at 10 a.m. local." - Paste, 4/13/21
